Town to keep statue of Black child, South soldier

ALLENDALE TOWNSHIP Leaders in a western Michigan community have voted to keep a statue of Confederate and Union Civil War soldiers with a Black child kneeling between them.

The Allendale Township board voted 5-2 Monday, despite a recommendation from a group that the statue be replaced by one with Union soldiers who are Black, Native American and white.

"It's been made very clear to me that the majority of our residents wish for the Civil War statue to remain in the garden of honor," said Jody Hansen, township clerk and board member.

Dozens of people attended the meeting, which was held outdoors at a park about 1.5 miles (2.4 kilometers) west of Grand Rapids.

The Civil War statue at Veterans Garden of Honor in Allendale Township. A citizens committee in western Michigan has proposed removing a park statue of a Union soldier and Confederate soldier standing back to back as a slave child kneels between them. The Garden of Honor Memorial Committee presented its suggestion to the Allendale Township board which could vote June 14 on the statue's future.

That better lesson can be taught children than by being able to say, "We had this thing. We thought it was OK. We have since learned that we were wrong," said area resident Cathy Seaver, who wants the statue removed.

Barbara VanderVeen, who opposed keeping the statue, asked if the child, which represents a slave, could at least be removed. Trustee Candy Kraker said the artist included that removing it would damage the structural integrity.

Some stolen military guns used in violent crimes

By Kristin M. Hall, James Laporta, Justin Pritchard and Justin Myers
The Associated Press

Pulling a pistol from his waistband, the young man spun his human shield toward police.

"Don't do it!" a pursuing officer pleaded. The young man complied, releasing the bystander and tossing the gun, which skittered across the city street and then into the hands of police.

They soon learned that the 9mm Beretta had a rap sheet. Bullet casings linked it to four shootings, all of them in Albany, New York.

And there was something else. The pistol was U.S. Army property, a weapon intended for use against America's enemies, not on its streets.

The Army couldn't say how its Beretta M9 got to New York's capital. Until the June 2018 police foot chase, the Army didn't even realize someone had stolen the gun. Inventory records checked by investigators said the M9 was 600 miles away — safe inside Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

"It's incredibly alarming," said Albany County District Attorney David Soares. "It raises the other question as to what else is seeping into a community that could pose a clear and present danger."

The armed services and the Pentagon are not eager for the public to know the answer.

In the first public accounting of its kind in decades, the Associated Press investigation has found that at least 1,900 U.S. military firearms were lost or stolen during the 2010s, with some resurfacing in violent crimes. Because some armed services have suppressed the release of basic information, AP's trail is a certain undercount.

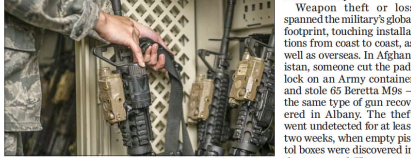

Government records covering the Army, Marine Corps, Navy and Air Force show pistols, machine guns, shotguns and automatic assault rifles have vanished from armories, supply warehouses, Navy warships, firing ranges and other places where they were used, stored or transported. These weapons of war disappeared because of unlocked doors, sleeping troops, a surveillance system that didn't record, break-ins and other security lapses that, until now, have not been publicly reported.

While AP's focus was firearms, military explosives also were lost or stolen, including armor-piercing grenades that ended up in an Atlanta backyard.

Weapon theft or loss spanned the military's global footprint, touching installations from coast to coast, as well as overseas. In Afghanistan, someone cut the padlock on an Army container that stole 65 Beretta M9s — the same type of gun recovered in Albany. The theft went undetected for at least two weeks, when empty pistol boxes were discovered in the compound. The weapons were not recovered.

Even elite units are not immune. A former member of a Marines special operations unit was busted with two stolen guns. A Navy SEAL lost his pistol during a fight in a restaurant in Lebanon.

On Tuesday, in the wake of the AP investigation, Army Secretary Christine Wormuth told a hearing of the Senate Armed Services Committee that she would be open to new oversight on weapons accountability. The Pentagon used to share annual updates about stolen weapons with Congress, but the requirement to do so ended years ago and public accountability has slipped.

OBITUARY BRIEF

'Gone Girl' actor Lisa Banes dies 10 days after hit-and-run

NEW YORK — "Gone Girl" actor Lisa Banes died 10 days after being injured by a hit-and-run driver in New York City, police said. The 65-year-old Banes, who was struck by a scooter or motorcycle while crossing a street on June 4, died Monday at Mount Sinai Morningside Hospital, a police department spokesperson said. The driver did not stop, police said. Banes appeared in numerous television shows and movies, including "Gone Girl" in 2014 and "Cocktail" with Tom Cruise in 1988. On television, she had roles on "Nashville," "Madam Secretary," "Masters of Sex" and "NCIS." She acted on stage regularly, including Broadway appearances in the Neil Simon play "Rumors" in 1988, in the musical "High Society" in 1998 and in the Noel Coward play "Present Laughter" in 2010. Her manager, David Williams, said Banes was hit as she was crossing Amsterdam Avenue on the way to visit the Juilliard School, her alma mater.

Ballot drive targets law that underpins virus rules

LANSING — A conservative group said Monday it will launch a ballot drive to require legislative approval to extend emergency pandemic orders beyond 28 days — the latest bid to neuter the power of Gov. Gretchen Whitmer's administration to issue coronavirus restrictions.

The initiative will be organized by Unlock Michigan. Last year, the Republican-affiliated ballot committee successfully gathered voter signatures to repeal a 75-year-old law — later declared unconstitutional — that underpinned the Democratic governor's rules. After the ruling, her administration kept many limits intact, and eased and tightened them under a 1978 law that gives the state health director broad authority to issue epidemic orders.

The new measure would revise the law — whose origins date to the 1918 flu pandemic — to make such orders unenforceable after 28 days unless the Legislature OKs an extension. Local health officers who impose restrictions would need the blessing of their governing body to go longer than 28 days.

"Neither this governor, nor any future governor, will be allowed to rule by decree in the future," Unlock Michigan spokesman Fred Wszolek said.

The group on Tuesday will submit the form of its petition to the state elections bureau for review. If it collects roughly 340,000 valid voter signatures, the GOP-led Legislature could pass the initiative instead of letting it go to a public vote. Whitmer could not veto it. She twice has vetoed regular bills that would have added the 28-day provision.

Police: Man and teen slain, 2 other teens wounded in Lansing

LANSING — A 19-year-old man and 16-year-old boy were slain and two other teens have been wounded during an early morning shooting near a park in Lansing.

Police responded about 1 a.m. Monday to reports of shots fired near the city's Rotary Park to find the 19-year-old man and a 14-year-old girl. The man was pronounced dead at the scene. The girl was taken to a hospital and listed in stable condition. Officers also were notified that two more shooting victims were taken to a hospital. The 16-year-old was pronounced dead at a hospital. A 17-year-old boy was in stable condition.

Legislature passes $6.6B in federal virus aid

By David Eggert
The Associated Press

LANSING — The Michigan Senate voted unanimously Tuesday to allocate nearly $4.4 billion in federal COVID-19 aid to K-12 schools after Republican lawmakers and Democratic Gov. Gretchen Whitmer's administration reached an agreement.

The supplemental budget bill — one of two to advance in the Legislature — would account for all but about $302 million in unallotted school funding from U.S. rescue packages approved in March and December. The House, meanwhile, voted to release $2.2 billion in coronavirus aid designated for food and rental assistance, and local governments. Final legislative votes are expected Wednesday.

The action was a sign of progress weeks after Whitmer and GOP legislative leaders announced the framework of a deal to open budget talks following Republicans' attempts to tie the allotment of some federal funding to curbs on her emergency pandemic powers. She had vetoed some proposed spending as a result. Negotiations continue over the 2021-22 budget and how to use billions in other virus funding.

"I appreciate the movement and there is a lot more work to do," state budget director Dave Massaron said. House Appropriations Committee Chairman Thomas Albert, a Lowell Republican, said the measures are time-sensitive because of federal deadlines to distribute aid.

"This is another significant step to get families, communities and students the help they need after an extremely difficult year and a half," he said.

Under federal law, school districts and charter schools with higher numbers or portions of poor students will automatically get a large share of $4.2 billion. The Senate removed a House-passed provision that would have directed an additional $362 million to districts with higher percentages of children from middle-class and wealthy families — a bid to ensure all schools receive an increase of at least $1,093 per student regardless of the federal formula.

The status of that funding was not immediately clear, leaving roughly one-third of 537 traditional districts and about 20 of 275 charters in limbo. Nearly $1.8 billion would go to private schools, as designated under federal law.
